Occupational Therapy Commissioning Services

Therapy swings due to their function fall under very strict regulation surrounding their initial install, load testing, daily inspection and annual certification. In our experience, facility operators are unaware of their legal obligations around this specialist equipment.

What do we encounter most often?

- A therapy swing purchased from a reputable supplier but installed using unapproved unsuitable fixings by someone unfamiliar with the requirements.
- No test certificate available as finished assembly was never tested (legal requirement)
- Swing system has no unique serial number identifying it nor a clearly marked "safe working load" (legal requirement)
- No annual inspection + certification has taken place (legal requirement)
- Quite often the system, in particular the anchor connection to the building is severely worn and deteriorated

How can OTCS help?

OTCS specialise in coordinating all aspects of the compliance process.

We achieve this in 6 steps.

1. Conduct a site assessment to determine the scope of work
2. Carry out remedial work where necessary
3. Test and commission points as required
4. Provide staff training for daily inspection and operation
5. Establish a schedule for third party statutory inspection
6. Documentation preparation and handover to client
